pets

Make your Dog your Best Friend during COVID-19

Find creative ways to cope with the stress with a companion who will always be there for you. Your dog.

Having your dog be your best friend during coronavirus

The COVID-19 pandemic has forced many of us to hole up indoors, which mean’s we’ve had to re-imagine our relationships with friends and family. Being in quarantine or lockdown can mean going weeks without face-to-face social interaction, leading to feelings of isolation and loneliness. The good news is that dog owners can take this time to reimagine their relationship with their furry friend and turn them into one of their closest companions for life.

Dogs have a unique ability to provide their owners with an endless amount of love and emotional support. They provide an outlet for fun and play, while bringing lots of laughter and levity into the home to keep you in the present moment rather than obsessing on an uncertain future. In fact, studies have shown that dogs provide comfort that is at least equal to that of a close friend.

[Read: The Health and Mood-Boosting Benefits of Pets]

A recent study conducted at the University of Utah found:

- The presence of a companion dog is associated with lower cardiovascular responses during stressors, even lower than that of having a close friend present.
- Being wholly satisfied and attached to your dog is associated with an owner’s increased oxytocin levels in the brain, compared to those without dogs.
- Companion dogs make significant contributions in aiding social welfare situations, as therapy dogs have been shown to alleviate pain and distress in chronic pain patients.
- Dogs play an important role in psychiatric settings, being successfully used with patients struggling with depression, loneliness, addiction, schizophrenia, and phobias.
- When examining emotional responses, participants with their dog present have significantly lowered feelings of distress and nervousness.
- Overall, interactions with their dog make people happier, less lonely, and more relaxed, secure, and affectionate.

Fun and stimulating activities to do with your dog

Being creative and finding new activities to do with your dog are essential for a happy and emotionally content home companion. Some activities could include:

Long Walks and Hikes. Going on a long walk with your dog, while keeping within social distancing guidelines, is a great way to not only explore new areas, but also to get exercise that might be hard to come by with gyms closed.

Homemade Dog Treats. This allows you to not only to spend quality time with your dog, but cultivate your culinary skills, which during a pandemic of this magnitude, is not a bad idea.
Training. Now that you’re around the house more, you have ample time to train and improve your dog’s behavior. This not only provides mental stimulation for your dog, but the benefits of this will last well after the pandemic is over.

Dog Yoga. Finding Zen has never been more important than right now, so use this time to incorporate yoga and meditation into daily playtime with your dog. This can help you destress and will mean more quality time between you and your furry companion.

Stairway Dash. It you feel that walks or fetch are getting boring and your dog is still overly excited, this is a sure way to not only tucker your dog out, but leave you feeling fully exercised as well. Challenging your dog to a race up a flight of stairs is a fun and socially safe way to physically engage your dog during quarantine.

Obstacle Course. Setting up an obstacle course is a great way to get creative with your dog. Dig out the hula hoops, jump ropes, and basketballs that are buried in your garage and lay out a course for your dog to navigate. Be sure to reward your dog with lots of encouragement and treats afterwards.

Tug-of-War. Most dogs are thrilled at the prospect of a great game of tug-of-war. Depending on how big or how small your dog is, take an old hand towel, washcloth, or bath towel and use it as a substitute for a braided rope toy.

Relaxing. You might be guilty of over-indulging in this particular activity, but nevertheless, after a long day of new tricks and new adventures, snuggling up together on the couch while watching a movie is the perfect way to cap off a busy day.

Teaching your dog new tricks

Teaching your dog new tricks is a powerful and fun way to form a bond that’s more communicative and ultimately closer. These new tricks can also improve overall obedience and manners, while increasing your dog’s flexibility, balance, and concentration. Some easy ones to start could include:

- Shake Hands. Teach your dog to shake your hand. First, present a handful of treats in front of your dog, they will naturally be inclined to paw at your hand, and as they continue to paw, begin to use the command “shake”.
- Paws Up Trick. Teach your dog to put their front paws up onto a high object, such as a step stool, small chair, or tree stump. For this, have the object of your choice next to you and a treat in your hand. Move your hand slowly so your dog follows the treat and takes a step towards the object. Once they’ve done this, raise your hand slightly to encourage your dog to raise their front paws up and onto the object. Once their feet are up, reward them. Repeat this until the movement is fluid, and say, ‘paws up’ while gesturing in the exact same way.

- Crawl. Teach your dog to crawl towards you. First, have your dog assume a lying down position. Then, have a few treats in your closed hand, but place it close to your dog’s nose so they can smell them. Bring your hand back while keeping it slightly lower than your dog’s nose to prevent them from getting up. As your dog shuffles forward, reward them. Be sure to keep rewarding each little bit of shuffling until your dog is confident in this movement. Once they are able to shuffle forwards a meter or so, start adding verbal cues such as ‘crawl’ while repeating the movement with your hand.

Once you and your dog are comfortable with these, you can move on to more difficult tricks like standing on their hind legs, teaching your dog to wave, or even having your dog jump up onto your back! For links to more dog tricks, see the Get more help section below.

Be a best friend to your dog

Remember that with any relationship you get in what you put out. Dogs are no different in that respect; so be sure to respect and observe your dog’s needs. In turn, they will be more willing to make you their best friend. Ways in which to do this include:

- Grooming. Be sure to wash your dog regularly and, depending on fur length, brush their hair at least once per week. If it’s a particularly rainy season and your dog’s outside playtime gets them dirty, be sure to rinse them immediately afterwards. Remember, only use shampoo and other products specifically designed for use on dogs.

- Respecting your dog’s personal space. A dog, just like a human, needs time to themselves to rest and reset. Allowing your dog this time and space are important to their well-being and functionality as a home companion. Try to better understand their body language so you know when your dog might be feeling the need for alone time.

- Taking your dog to the vet. Making sure your dog is healthy and up-to-date on vaccinations is a sure way to keep your dog happy. This also relates to reading your dog’s body language; if they are displaying signs of discomfort, be sure to get them in to see a veterinarian.
• Regular nourishment. Always make sure that your dog has fresh drinking water available to them at all times. Let them see you fill their water and food bowl, as they will come to know you as their primary provider. And being consistent with portion size and feeding times is a good way to control your dog’s weight and will ultimately make them healthier and happier.

• Creating a safe home environment. Indoors, be sure to keep household cleaning products, medications, or other possible poisons safely out of reach. Heavy objects should be stowed safely around the house, so they don’t fall and injure your dog. Upper story houses should have safeguards on windows and screened doors to prevent your dog from falling. Also be mindful of your dog’s outdoor space. Making sure a backyard is fenced in and keeping your dog off trafficked streets is key in maintaining your dog’s safety.

Health benefits of dogs

COVID-19 has caused a sharp increase in depression and anxiety. In fact, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) has issued warnings pertaining to dealing with mental and physical stress during this pandemic.

[Read: Coronavirus Mental Health Toolkit: Getting Through the COVID Winter]

Developing a closer relationship with your dog will not only help you physically, but will help you mentally cope with the added stress this pandemic has caused by:

• Lowering levels of depression. Pet owners of all kinds are shown to suffer less from depression.

• Lowering levels of anxiety. Playing with your dog can increase serotonin and dopamine levels in the brain, which calm and relax.

• Reducing stress. Petting your dog can reduce stress, lower blood pressure, and calm your heart rate.

• Relieving symptoms of PTSD. By lifting your mood and helping lower stress, dogs bring out feelings of love that can positively combat Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) symptoms.

• Heightening levels of companionship. As COVID-19 has forced us to spend more time holed up indoors, companion dogs provide a source of friendship and company, soothing the physical and mental strain of loneliness.
Tips for protecting your dog from COVID-19

Although the risk of your dog contracting coronavirus is low, it is best to be smart and safe. The CDC recommends:

- Keep your dog on a leash and make sure they stay the recommended six feet from animals outside your household.
- Avoid the dog parks or other public places where crowds and animals tend to gather.
- Do not put a mask on your dog. Masks could do more harm than good for your animal.
- Do not wipe or bathe your dog with chemical disinfectants such as alcohol, hydrogen peroxide, or any other products not solely designed for use on animals.

Caring for your dog if you get COVID-19

Have a preparedness plan. If you become sick or require hospitalization you need to have someone to take care of your dog.

- Arrange for a family member or friend to care for your dog if you become too ill.
- Only transport your dog using sturdy leashes, harnesses, and secure carriers to ensure your dog’s safety. Make sure that your dog is wearing a collar and identification that is up to date and visible at all times. Carriers should be large enough to allow your dog to stand comfortably, turn around, and lie down. (They may have to stay in it for hours at a time.) If your dog is prone to chewing items, inspect the carrier’s inside to ensure that your dog can’t dislodge or ingest items that could cause injury.
- Write down information about your dog’s feeding schedules, medical conditions, and behavior issues, along with the name and number of your veterinarian in case you have to board your dog or place them in foster care.
- Provide a favorite toy for comfort and a familiar blanket for warmth.
- Keep all vaccines up to date and have copies of those records available in the event that boarding becomes necessary.
- Ensure that all medications are documented with dosages and administering directions. It’s a good idea to include the prescription from your veterinarian.

Authors: Kai Lundgren and Robert Segal M.A.
Will you help keep HelpGuide free for all?

One in four people will struggle with mental health at some point in their lives. And with the coronavirus pandemic and troubled economy, many are in crisis right now. More than ever, people need a trustworthy place to turn to for guidance and hope. That is our mission at HelpGuide. Our free online resources ensure that everyone can get the help they need when they need it—no matter what health insurance they have, where they live, or what they can afford. But as a nonprofit that doesn’t run ads or accept corporate sponsorships, we need your help. If you have already contributed, thank you. If you haven’t, please consider helping us reach those who need it: Donate today from as little as $3.

Last updated: January 2021

Get more help

How Dogs Can Help with Depression - How dogs can boost your outlook and mood. (NAMI)

How Science Supports Pets for Improving Your Mental Health - The benefits of dogs and other animals. (Mental Health America)

Coping with Stress - Tips for reducing stress during the pandemic. (CDC)

45 Dog Tricks You Can Easily Teach Your Dog - Compiled by John Woods. (All Things Dogs)